

I would just like to say that I am opposed to further media consolidation and the further deregulation will only continue this process. Considering that my peers (high school and college students) form a majority of their opinions around those delivered by major broadcast stations, who are playing the same music and news as radio stations owned by large conglomerates (such as Clear Channel), who are then reported on by papers across the nation, it is important to note that all my peers lack diversity in knowledge, awareness and many other important things. Basically, the further deregulation and then consolidation of the media serves not the public interest, but only the monetary interests of those few companies in control. Please don't limit the access of knowledge for my peers, the future of America. Please don't let three companies determine our cultural and intellectual future as a nation. Thanks.
